to get rid of their "stuff," and but for the fact that a gauk of men might be moving a house or two while they are campligaing for a team of horses and a wagen, there would be no interference by the adjutant general. He has, havever, been compelled to take up the transportation matter in a vigfrouse-tnamete, and within a day or two will have everything working in good shape.

Forage for the horses is badly needed. There have been tons and carloads of supplies received from all series of the country for the suffering residents of Galveson, but not a wisp of hay or a bushel of oats has come in for the animals. The storm carried away nearly all of the forage there was on the island, and it is impossible to obtain more, unless it is sent in from the outside. The atrepgth of the horses must be kept up, if the city is to be cleaned speedity, and forage has become an absolute necessity.

Not many of the dogs of Galveston survicul the storm, and of those which were ief, nearly all have been killed. For a few days after the storm people were for the most part busy with their own woes and had but little time to give the lower antiquis. The result was that a number of dogs went mad because of lack of for a and water. They were shot at the first opportunity, and now if any dog desires a appealy passport out of Gaiveston it is only necessary for him to set up a howl. At speedy passport out of Galveston it is only necessary for him to set up a howh. At about the second how a solider is after him with a rifle. Several borses have been shot which and evidently become insans from the injuries received in the storm to because of the lack of food. Two were killed last night while running up and down the streets at a terrific pace.

General McKibbin left for San Antonio this morning, accompanied by his aides, dioutenants Perry and Perguson. He expecis to return within a lew days, Mayor Jones having made an especial request that he do so.

"There is not a great deal mere that I can do," said General McKibbin this morning as he stood on the dock. "The city is commencing to come up and the cit-teens here who are handling matters in a most excellent way are capable of doing that without any directions from me. Mayor Jones has asked me to come back, however, and I will do so I am person-ally in favor of burning as much of the debris as possible, and of burning it as quickly as the power of man will permit. I am not an alarmist by any means, and I do not predict a positiones, but I think that things are coming to that point where a positiones may be possible unless prompt measures are taken, and there is nothing that will be so effective as fire. Burn everything and burn it at once. The water mains are working now and there will be no trouble in controlling the flames since there is plenty of water in all parts of the Provisions continue to come in from all points, but there is no need for it all. The has joined his movement to restore points, but there is no need for it all. The supplies are handled in an excellent manner and there is no waste. Stringent orders have been given that all people who attempt to procure more than their rightful propertion of the supplies shall be promptly punished, and there have already been several arrests for the offense.

During the late hours of the evening decided improvement was made in the city's condition. Electric light wires had been excung for several days as rariely was the linemen could work and in a evening the current was turned on. One lights were small incandescent globes and they were hung high upon poles, but they were numerous and releved the city from the darkness that has hung over it for the last week.

The wharves are lined with people desiring to leave the city, and the Lawrence is reached to be auditously every trip. When the limited number is reached to be taken on bosed. The residents of Galveston are plucky in the extreme in their determination to rebuild and make Galveston a greater and better city than it ever has been before, but in one direction, at least, they have suffered a less that is heyond repair, and they lies in the extent of terrifory wrested from them by the storm. The waters of the guilf now cover about 5,300,000 square feet of ground that was formerly a part of Galveston.

This loss has been suffered entirely on the south side of the cir, where the fiser residences were built facing the guif and where land was held at a higher valuation than in any other part of the city with the exception of the business dissipation.
